Liberals Question the Premier's Commitment to Debating Muskrat Falls

The Official Opposition is again calling on the Premier to open the House of Assembly to all expert opinions on the proposed Muskrat Falls deal.

The Premier has publically dismissed a report released by the Atlantic Institute for Market Studies (AIMS) as a right wing opinion that she doesn't share. AIMS has several well respected individuals among its senior ranks including the CEO of Emera Newfoundland and Labrador, and an economist from Memorial University.

The Halifax Chronicle Herald reported on October 10, 2012 that the report's author Gordon Weil "...said the regulatory review that will take place in Nova Scotia is important and something that's missing from the process in Newfoundland and Labrador".

Premier Kathy Dunderdale has publically stated that her Government will not entertain the possibility of calling expert witnesses during the Special Debate on Muskrat Falls. With so many questions still surrounding the Muskrat Falls deal, it should be evident to the Premier that this is no longer about the DG3 numbers and the final package which will be presented by Government on behalf of Manitoba Hydro International (MHI).

"How is it that the Premier can deny both her members and all elected MHA's the right to hear from experts who have done due diligence by examining the proposed deal as it currently stands?" asked Official Opposition Leader Dwight Ball.

"This very well may be the final chance for Government to put all its cards on the table and offer up what it claims is a great deal for the province," said Ball. "As a resident of Newfoundland and Labrador, and as leader of the Official Opposition, I am asking the Premier to allow expert witnesses to present their findings in the House of Assembly during the Special Debate on Muskrat Falls."

If indeed all the information on the proposed Muskrat Falls deal will be made public, let the public have complete access to all the experts not just the information being presented by MHI.
